TEN ADDRESSES AT SEVEN SERVICES.

ELL HEARD. [BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.] East Northfield, Mass., Aug. 20.—The Bible Conference closed this evening, after a series of seven conference held at Camp Northfield, on Round Top and in the Auditorium. The Rev. Dr. J. G. Cumpanism, of Edinburgh, spoke at the camp this morning again at the public service in early this morning, again at the public service in the forenoon and in the evening. The Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, preached twice. The Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the Christian Endeavor Society, made an address in the afternoon, and led a consecration service at Round Top at the hour of sunset. John Willis Baer, the secretary of the society, had charge of the Endeavor meeting, and discussed practical methods of work. W. R. Newell, assistant super-the life of Christ. George C. Stebbins led the singing, which was especially fine. After the testimony and consecration service this evening Mr. Baer distributed the following pledge, which he asked those present to sign: "From this moment I solemnly and by Thy grace renounce and put away the evil things which have usurped an unholy supremacy with me, the companionships that lower the temperature of my inner life, the books and amusements which have cast a shadow hours of fellowship, the sin which so easily me, the soft yielding to sloth, which has me of so many seasons of hallowed comnunion, the desire to please men rather than Thee, succeed in this world rather than to be a humble servant in Thy glorious household. All these I hereby steadfastly renounce and forsake. Never again, by Thy help, shall these things have dominion over me. They may tempt me by sugges-tion, but they shall not reign in my life."

While many of the Conference visitors will leave this beautiful town to-morrow, many will remain the rest of the month in order to attend the adof Mr. Morgan on "The Spirit of God" "Table Talks of the Son of Man." The Camp and the Northfield, one of the seminary buildings and several boarding houses will be open at re duced rates from now on. Any one desiring to attend these interesting addresses, which begin on Tuesday, should address Albert Moody. Mr. Mor-gan's plans for September and October will be gan's plans for September and October will be formulated within a few days by D. L. Moody, to whom letters of inquiry should be sent. Mr. Moody had charge of the principal services to-day, as usual. In referring to the address of

Dr. Cunningham, published in The Tribune, he said

"It was especially refreshing to hear a man tell what Isalah contained, without once referring to the question whether there were one or two Isalahs. Not long ago a minister wanted to talk to me about two Isaiahs. I said to him: 'For pity's sake, tell me what the prophecy contains. That seems to me the all important question."

DR. CLARK ON CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR. Dr. Clark's topic this afternoon was "Providence in Christian Endeavor," and in his address he said:

The providential factor in the Christian Endeavor

The providential factor in the Christian Endeavor movement is to me a most engaging theme, for there never was a movement, I believe, in which there was less of the human element and more of the Divine; never one which grew more spontaneously out of the need of the Church and the readiness of the young people, guided by the will of God. Let me tell you the simple story of the rise and progress of the movement, for nothing will so plainly show this providential leading as this chapter of history.

A pastor in a Down East city was struggling with the problem of training his young people for larger usefulness and greater activity in the church. He knew not which way to turn. He was at his wits end. He had tried all the poor little makeshifts to capture and hold the spiritual energies of the young people, like the lyceum, the literary society, the musical class, the entertainment club, and they had all wretchedly failed. Then, almost in despair, he turned his thought to their deeper natures, appealed to the heroic within them, and called upon them to do larger and harder things for God than they had ever dreamed of doing. To his surprise and joy, this appeal reached their hearts. To this life they, responded. The pledge, instead of frightening them, attracted fihem. The committees gave them exercise for all their faculties, and showed the need of consecrating all of their being to God. In the prayer smeeting, under the stimulus of this promise, the consecration meetings they renewed their vows of allegiance.

unheralded beginning, followed by greater things under God's guiding hand. Let me briefly rehearse the simple story. One of the members of the first society in Portland was a young mechanic who a few years before had left his home church in the great railroad town of Crewe, in England. When writing to his pastor he said:

"We have a new way of helping young Christians in our church in America, called the Society of Christian Endeavor. I wonder if it would not work just as well in the old church in Crewe?"

Then he went on to describe its plans. The pastor tried them. They bore transplanting. They worked just as well in England as in America, and from that little seed dropped from the hand of ahat young mechanic sprang the tree of Christian Endeavor in Great Britain, where are now 6,000 isocieties with 25,000 members. About the same time, some ten or eleven years ago, a Yankee sea captain sailed for Australia from the old city of Newburyport, where the second society of Christian Endeavor was established. Among the few passengers was the son of the captain, a bright ind earnest young Endeavorer, who took with him his pledge and his religious purpose. On reaching Brisbane he said to the Baptist pastor, "Why don't you have an Endeavor Society?" In this himple question of an American lad was wrapped up the germ of Christian Endeavor in Australia, with its 100,000 members, for when the simple workings of the society were explained the pastor cald:

"Why, indeed, should we not have an Endeavor of Society." Year soon he had one and the work.

workings of the society were explained the pastor said:

"Why, indeed, should we not have an Endeavor Society?" Very soon he had one, and the work has gone on by leaps and bounds from that day. To China the seed of Christian Endeavor was carried by a young missionary fresh from America, and now the conventions manned by the Chinese and conducted by them from beginning to end are surprisingly large and as enthusiastic as the great National convention that American Endeavorers know so well. Half a dozen years ago a stray copy of "The Golden Rule," now "The Christian Endeavor World," was sent to a stranded sailor in the island of Jamaica. It fell into the hands of an earnest Christian man, a resident of the island. In it he read something of the society. He thought it as good for the tropic, sun-kissed plantations of Jamaica as for stern New-England's rock bound coast. In other words, God put the seed into his hand, he dropped it into mellow soil, and now all over that beautiful island, in almost every church, are found these societies of earnest young people.

Bo I might go on to show how in every land every church, are found these societies of earnest young people.

Bo I might go on to show how in every land God has nourished and watered the seed and caused it to bring forth a hundredfold. In just the same way have all the later developments of the work arisen and prospered. The local and State Christian Endeavor Unions, which have been so creatly instrumental in advancing the movement. work arisen and prospered. The local and State Christian Endeavor Unions, which have been so greatly instrumental in advancing the movement and promoting the fellowship of the young people; the great conventions, which bring together every year from twenty-five thousand to fifty thousand delegates; the new impetus given to the cause of good citizenship and missions; the effort for peace; the plans to evangelize the solder and salor-all originated in the same humble, unpremeditated way and have been carried on to success by God's good providence.

So, too, with the efforts to help, through Chris-tian Endeavor, the boys and girls and their older 'brothers and sisters, who yet are not quite men and women, through the Junior and Intermediate brothers and sisters, who yet are not quite men and women through the Junior and Intermediate isocieties, which are assuming large proportions. I must not close without saying a few words concerning two of the latest developments of the movement called "The Tenth Legion" and "The Quiet Hour," the former having for its mission to lead the young people to dedicate a proportionate part of their money systematically to God's service, the latter having for its mission to lead them to decleate a regular portion of every day to communion with God and meditation on Him. The blessed results of these efforts cannot be overestimated, and the gladness and peace which they have brought into tens of thousands of young lives.

One or two things are made very plain by this lives.

One or two things are made very plain by this hasty review of God's leading in Christian Endeavor. First, the susceptive character of the soul, the eagerness of young life for the deepest consecration and the largest service. I am coming more and more to believe in young people, in their sincerity and heroism. There is a chord in their lives which, can always be touched, and that is the chord of devotion. Second—The sufficiency and sovereignty of God. He has not deserted the world. He is always ready with a new plan, a new movement, when the time is ripe. With humility and reverence this review teaches us to say. "Not unto us, O God, not unto us, but unto Thy name give glory."

CHRISTIAN PEOPLE AND THE MASSES. One of the greatest sermons heard at the Con-ference this year was delivered on Thursday evening by Mr. Morgan on "The Relation of Christian People to the Masses by Whom They Are Sur-rounded." The sermon was based upon the miracle of feeding the five thousand, and was in part as All the deeds of Jesus were symbolic and suggestive, and this narrative of the feeding of the five thousand is a radiant revelation of the laws of Christian service. You remember how the Master said, "I am the truth," I often remind you of it, because I am perpetually remembering it myself. He said, "I am the truth," not that I teach or I unfold it or I declare it, but "I am the truth," so that every day of He life was based was spiritual verities, and all attended things follows:

of that life were impulsed by the same underlying verities that found their supreme expression in His great redemptive work; and so we may take this narrative and look at it as a beautiful series of pictures revealing to us what our true relationship to Him and through Him, therefore, to the crowds, ought to be.

And, first of all, here are the four points I want to ask you to look at—the multitudes hungry, the attitude of Christ toward the multitude and toward His disciples, and then the disciples, first in their relationship to Christ, and then in their relationship to the crowd, and the fourth point that I want you to look at in the narrative is, balancing time. Now, if you remember that the Master thus lifted the material miracles into the realm of spiritual teaching, you will easily now be able to follow. Those people hungered. It is a great picture, brought down to a single point, of the perpetual condition of men without God. Now, we need an anointed vision to see this, beloved; these are the closing days of a century, and it is a very much vaunted century, this, the century of progress, the century of reform, and I am not going to deny for a single moment that it has been a very, very wonderful century, and it am perfectly prepared to admit that the last fifty years have been the most wonderful of all, and of the decades that have gone to make up the century.

But, listen, we are in danger amid this so-called intendent of the Moody Bible Institute, led one meeting, devoted to Bible study, in which he gave a helpful analysis of the fourfold gospel history of century.

But, listen, we are in danger amild this so-called solution of the people of losing sight of this fact, that wherever you find a man who is godless you find a men who is hungry with a hunger that can never be satisfied. And it doesn't matter for a single moment whether that man be volgar or refined, undetended to cultured, whether that raan live in the tenement of the avenues—shall we say in Fifth-ave, or in the West End? If he is a godless, he is a hungry man. Everywhere the cry of humanity is after God. Degraded manhood, wronged womanhood, blighted childhood, all these things go to make up the son of men from the advention of the control of the c on.

"Give ye them to eat." You are responsible abo these hungry people, and it is only as the Church of God faces those two things-impossibility, re sponsibility-that it is likely the Church of God will come into line with the Master in such a way as to realize the possible and the impossible, and thus fulfil the responsibility. Two.things, and nust do it. Now, if God will just put every one of us there Now, if God will just nut every one of us there! Of course, I know your minds are running on to what is coming behind. I am not anxious for you to get there. I am far more anxious that you should feel that the fact that the crowd around you is hungry is the Master's method of appealing to you, and He says to you, you, you, "Feed them." "Master, send them away. We cannot do it. Send them to the villages and cities. Let them go and do something for themselves. Send them away empty, that they may get food." And the Master says, "No, I will send them away when they are full."

do something for themselves. Send them away empty, that they may get food." And the Master says. "No. I will send them away when they are tays." No. I will send them away when they are to do it. Am I my brother's keeper? Yes. Is it true that I am actually responsible about the souls of these people that are hungry?

Yes, give ye them to eat. The ultimate aim of every organization in your church, my brother, ought to be to get men and women into living contact with the living Christ, that they may be satisfied. If we are going to seat people in companies to discuss with them the problem of how and when and where, in God's name disband them and let them go about their business. But if we are going to seat them in order that they may be fed, not by us and yet by us, but by us in relation to Christ, then there is the true place of organization in all our church life. And what next? Next, they take back from Christ what they had given to him. "Twas spring time when He blessed the bread," twas harvest fhen He brake the bread." In some special services some years ago at home a wooman came to me at the close of the first Sunday morning service and she said:

"Oh, I would give anything to be in this work actively and actually. I would give anything to have some living part in the work that is going on here next week in winning men and women for Christ, but I don't know what to do."

I said, "My sister, are you prepared to give the Master the five loaves and the two fishes you possess?" She said: "I don't know that I have five loaves and two fishes." I said, "Have you anything that you have used in any way specially?" No she didn't think she had.

"Well, yes." she said, "I sing at home, and I have sung before now in an entertainment—anyou sing in order to fill hungry men?"

"She said. "I don't know that is home, and I have sung before now in an entertainment—can't you sing in order to fill hungry men?"

"She said. "I don't think I can."

"She said. "I don't think I can."

"She said. "I don't know has have you she sang. S wanted Him to do that at first, that was the introduction of the store. They said: "Send them away."

but He didn't, but by and by He sent them away. But do you notice this. It is just worth noticing in passing that the people that He sent away first were the disciples. He sent them over the sea, and got them out of the way, and when they were out of the way He said to the crowd, "Now, you may go." But He never sent that crowd away until He had filled them. I want you to see it, because here is the point of it. Christ was satisfied when they were satisfied. He couldn't have gone to His place of loneliness on that mountainside, to His place of communion with His fatner, if that crowd had gone away hungry. When the disciples wanted them to go away He fed them, and then, sending the disciples away and the crowd away. He went alone to God.

Do you want to bring satisfaction to the heart of the Master? You can only do it just in this way, as you, dear child of His love and child of His life, shall give Him all you have and use it for Him and through that man, that woman, that company, that crowd outside, shall get into the place of living heart satisfaction. Then you are helping to gladden the heart of the Lord Christ. Oh, marvel of marvels, and yet blessed fact, that I can in communion and union with Him help to bring in that great day that is coming when He shall see of the travall of soul and shall be satisfied, and every time I give Him my little and take it back and use it so some heart is satisfied He is satisfied.

"He that gives himself with his gold feeds three—Himself, his hungry neighbor and me."

is satisfied.
"He that gives himself with his gold feeds three—Himself, his hungry neighbor and me."
That is exactly the point here, that when I am thus used of the Master I bring satisfaction to Him. And then the second point of vision is the crowd.

Filled—oh, I love that word. I was conducting special meetings in a town in the midlands that shall be nameless and there came into that inquiry room a rag picker, a great, gaunt old man that had grown hoary in the service of sin and Satan, an awful character, but God had shown him his heart hunger and had revealed the Christ to him, and there in our inquiry room that man knelt and I knelt by him and I felt quite at home as I spoke to that man of the blood that cleanseth from all sin. I felt it was just what he wanted. And presently somebody touched me on the shoulder and said. "Here, won't you speak to this man?" And I looked around, and there kneeling next to me was the Mayor of the city, a man about as old as the ragpicker, but a man that had all the marks of culture and refinement, a man of position, and there he was, and I happened to know that six weeks before the Mayor had sentenced this man to a month's hard labor, and this man had got out a fortnight ago, and there they were side by side, and I had to turn from the ragpicker and talk to this man, and presently the light that had broken there broke here, and I found that the blood that was needed there was sufficient here. He filled them both. And the most blessed part of it is, though it really isn't a part of this address, when that man got up he went over to that man, and he said: "Well, we didn't meet here last time." It was the Mayor that said it, and the old fellow looked up—he had no idea who was there—and he said:

"No, we will never meet again like we did the last time, praise God." What a scene it was. It is on my meart, it is on my memory to this day. In that hour God was doing something for me, not as great as for those two men, for in that hour they found life, but He was giving me a great lesson: He was saying to me as I stood and looked at them, Christ can satisfy all conditions and satisfy the hunger of all sorts of men. He sent them away filled.

If this province could be occupied it might be of great advantage to the Government.

When Mayor Sutherland signed the franchise for a trolley system through the Seventh Ward recently he made the statement that he feit by no means certain whether the Union Company would construct all of the lines called for within the franchise before the expiration of one year. As yet no move has been taken to build any of the lines, and there are those who are inclined to believe that the Union corporation sought the franchises merely to shut out its rival.

The attempt of the Citizens' Entertainment Committee to illuminate the Palisades opposite this city on Friday night was not a success. NEW-YORK CITY.

The Columbian Club and Tammany General Committee of the XIIth Assembly District, of which Tity Clerk P. J. Scully is the leader, will have an annual outing at Witzel's Point View Island to norrow. They will go on the steamboat Cygnus, which will leave the pier at Proome-st, and the East River promptly at 9:30 a. m. Breakfast and finner will be served at the picnic place.

Jacob Rusick, thirty-one years old, of No. 463 Columbus-ave., went insane early yesterday morning, and jumped out of a window of his room, one flight up from the street. He broke one of his toes. He was picked up by Policeman Molloy, of the West Sixty-eighth-st. station, and sent to Bellevue Hospital.

HEAD-ON TROLLEY COLLISION.

THIRTY PERSONS HURT NEAR PHILA-DELPHIA ON SINGLE TRACK ROAD. Philadelphia, Aug. 20.-A head-on collision between two trolley cars occurred to-day on the Norristown, Chestnut Hill and Roxborough Railway, in Plymouth Township, Montgomery County, a few miles north of this city. Thirty persons were injured. The following are believed to be fatally hurt, and are in the Charity Hospital at Norristown:

PARSONS, John, Philadelphia; internal injuries and se HARTSLINE, William, West Point, Penn.; internal in-juries and ribs broken. NUNAN, Mrs. Bridget, seriously injured about the body.

Others badly hurt, but not fatally injured, are Mrs. Julia Moeshlin, Norristown, and Miss Alice McGuigan, Philadelphia, who are also in the hospital. The railway is a single track road, with switches. The passengers of the southbound car assert that the motorman failed to wait at the switch for the arrival of the car going north, and the accident resulted. Seeing that the collision could not be averted, many of the passengers jumped, and were severely bruised. Nearly all of the injured were taken to the hospital, but with the exception of those named all went way after having their wounds dressed.

DEATH ON THE EVE OF FORTUNE.

OLD SOLDIER DROPS DEAD WHILE BOARDING A

STEAMBOAT TO REVISIT HIS HOME, Newport News, Va., Aug. 20 (Special).—Smith E. Van Emburgh, a veteran of the Civil War, who recently became heir to a small fortune in New-Jersey, died suddenly last night on the steamer New-York, of the New-York, Peninsular and Northern Line, just as the boat was casting off her lines at Old Point to resume her trip to Cape Charles Van Emburgh had just crossed the gangplank, the last passenger to go aboard, when he was seen to reel and fall to the deck. He died instantly, Van Emburgh had relatives at Harrison, N. J. and it was there he was going to receive his part of an estate to which he had fallen heir. several years he had been an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, but had lived in Phæbus. For the last seven weeks he had been under treatment for heart disease. Several days ago he received a telegram from his brother at Harrison asking him to go home at once in order that the estate could be divided. At the time he was ill, and the physicians told him that death was only a matter of a few days. Yesterday he decided to go back home to die there, but his purpose was frustrated. In the old man's clothes was found a receipt for $1,000 from the Bank of Phœbus. Van Emburgh was sixty years old and belonged to a good New-Jersey family, but preferred to spend his last days with the old soldiers at the Home.
